Johnson Presents Medals To 4 U.S. Career Officials

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP)—Four Federal career officials got medals and praise from President Johnson today in a White House ceremony attended by their families and friends.

They received the President's Award for Distinguished Federal Civilian service; the highest honor that can be accorded a career employe of the Government.

The recipients were:

John Doar, 48 years old, first assistant to the Assistant Attorney General of the Civil Rights Division, Justice Department.

Herbert Friendman, superintendent, Atmosphere and Astrophysics Division, Navy Research Laboratory.

Lyman B. Kirkpatrick Jr., executive director-controller, Central Intelligence Agency.

Bromley K. Smith, executive secretary, National Security Council.

The recipients were selected by a board headed by Under Secretary of State George W. Ball.
